INTRODUCTION

Movement of the U.S. Army Intelligence Center and School, and the U.S. Army Combat Development Command Intelligence Agency from Fort Holabird, Maryland to Fort Huachuca was a major event of the past year. As a consequence, the post population in December, 1971 increased by almost 3,000 from December 1970 (App C). This population increase plus the construction of permanent type buildings was evidence of the increased importance of Fort Huachuca. Military personnel as well as members of the civilian community interpreted these developments to mean that the fort would remain active for years to come. This knowledge stimulated housing and commercial construction in local towns.

Most units and staff sections listed personnel turbulence and frequent changeover of key personnel as recurring problems. Among other changes, Major General Jack A. Albright succeeded Major General William B. Latta as Commanding General, USASTRATCOM, and Colonel George E. Green succeeded Colonel Ben L. Anderson as Commanding Officer, Headquarters, Fort Huachuca.

At year's end, important problems affecting the fort's future included a serious housing shortage, and concern about the water supply. The Facilities Engineer reported adequate water for current needs, but recommended continued emphasis on water conservation programs.

CHAPTER I

Organization and Missions

A. General

The strength of Headquarters, Fort Huachuca increased during 1971 with the addition of three companies (D,E, and F). Missions remained essentially the same throughout the year, however, arrival of the U.S. Army Intelligence Center and School, and the U.S. Army Combat Development Command Intelligence Agency intensified support problems for all staff sections. New missions included a drug control program, and emphasis on improvement of the environment and living conditions on post.¹

CHAPTER II

ACTIVITIES AND ACHIEVEMENTS

A. Construction and Memorialization

New buildings completed during 1971 included the 500 seat Cochise Theatre; a new U.S. Post Office in the Post Exchange complex area; a completely new laundry and dry cleaning plant (the first such in CONUS since 1944); 100 units of 4-bedroom quarters; a Post Exchange Cafeteria; and the Olmstead Guest House.

Among those construction projects started in 1971 were another 100 units of 3 and 4-bedroom housing; a new service club, to replace the one off post in use since World War II: a religious education center; the Kino Street Chapel; and a new troop billets complex.

An athletic field near Chaffee Parade Field was completed and named after Captain David Bujalski, a former company commander in the Combat Support Training Brigade who was killed-in-action in the Republic of Viet Nam. Mauborgne Hall, a Bachelor Officers Quarters, was named in honor of Major General Joseph O. Mauborgne, Chief Signal Officer, 1937-1941.

During the year the following street names were recommended by the Board for Memorialization and approved: Hall Circle, for Lieutenant General Charles P. Hall, CG of the 93d Infantry Division while it was at Fort Huachuca; Mays and Brown Streets, for CPL Isaiah Mays and SGT Benjamin Brown, Medal of Honor winners while members of the 24th Infantry in Arizona; Bernard Street, in honor of First SGT Rueben F. Bernard, 1st Dragoons (later Brevet Brigadier General); Kautz Court, in honor of COL (Brevet Major General) August V. Kautz, Commander of the Department of Arizona, who, in 1877 sent CPT Whitside to establish the camp that is today Fort Huachuca; Indian Scout Road, for the many Indian scouts who served on post; Kino Avenue, in memory of Father Eusebio Francisco Kino, the founder of many missions in southern Arizona; Coronado Avenue, in honor of the Spanish explorer Coronado; Healy Avenue, for LTC John H. Healy, a member of the 10th Cavalry who was one of those primarily responsible for the establishment of the Fort Huachuca Post Museum; Winans Avenue, in honor of Major General Edwin B. Winans who commanded Fort Huachuca and the 10th Cavalry, 1920-1923; and 6th Cavalry Road, for the regiment which founded and was the first regiment stationed at Fort Huachuca.

A map showing the main features of the post at the end of 1971 is included as Appendix I.
