August 1, 1921.

Mr. E. F. Robinson,
Supervising Engineer,
Albuquerque, New Mexico.

My dear Mr. Robinson:

It is noted, in connection with your summary of irrigation data for the project at Tuba, Western Navajo Reservation, that there are irrigable eight to nine hundred acres, while you report that 1025 acres were actually irrigated. Will you please explain how these figures were arrived at in order that some reconciliation can be made between these figures?

Very truly yours,

W. H. Reed

Chief Engineer.
